FOREWORD

The Central Council for Research in Indian Medicine and Homoeopathy, with a view to make available the knowledge of use of simple remedies in the treatment of simple and uncomplicated ailments seen commonly in day to day life, has brought out this handbook. It is felt that any average intelligent individual will be able to successfully and suitably use the material presented herein and this certainly minimises running for across the counter-remedies that are of prohibitive cost. The drugs listed in this, being safe and easily available, the individual neither faces difficulty to obtain the drug nor will he develop any untoward symptom or reaction. Normally, in case of most diseases, commencement of early treatment prevents further aggravation of the disease or its culmination into a major condition. Most of the diseases commonly seen do not call for any specialised interference or treatment. At best, any simple measure that can assist the natural process may only be considered and the book is expected to meet this in most cases. At the time when there is a large pouring in of new and newer drugs in the country, tendency for misuse or improper use is great and they ultimately trigger the onset of new group of diseases known by the name iatrogenic diseases that are worse than the original condition.

The handbook places in the hand of the readers time honoured remedies evolved out of experience that are simple to use and easy to obtain. It is hoped that the various remedies listed in the book will find a wide acceptance with physicians and others, since it brings medicare to the doorstep. The publication of this book would not have been possible but for the constant encouragement and sustained interest evinced by Dr Karan Singh, Honourable Minister for Health and Family Planning, Government of India, New Delhi who is also the President of our Council. The Council will be releasing similar hand books for other systems of medicine also in course of time.

P R E F A C E

Even Saint Agasthiyar dealt fully on home remedies in his work on 'Vaidya Kummī' (a kind of folk-dance-song) It is also a known fact that about 70 per cent of the ailments are simple and can be treated symptomatically, with simple household remedies. Elderly people in the rural areas have learnt by tradition and experience the application of simple home remedies readily available from their 'anjaraipetti' (Kitchen spice box) and kitchen garden as also drugs freely available in the common bazaar. The experience and knowledge about household remedies for simple ailments gained by the elder generation, due to various reasons, chief among them being the trend towards urbanised living and the non-survival of the joint family system in the present days.

The documentation of the above knowledge at this moment is worthwhile and will give a fillip to the proper growth and appreciation of Siddha System of Indian Medicine and its utilisation in the overall pattern of our existing medical relief organisation, specially in the rural areas. While selecting the drugs, the experts have kept in mind their easy availability, efficacy and cheapness. Further, it is needless to say that the remedies included in this brochure are used extensively from time immemorial. They will not produce any side effects, reactions or toxicity in the prescribed dosage. They may even be taken with any other medicaments, if advised and found necessary.
